What Does Evangelism Mean?

The sharing of that truth — the good news of Jesus — is called evangelism.

Evangelism means preaching, announcing, or otherwise communicating the gospel, our salvation. It's delivering the message that Jesus Christ is not only the Son of God but also gave His life as a sacrifice for our sins. In doing so, He ensured eternal life for anyone who believes.

As we are told in John 3:16, "For God so loved the world that He gave His one and only Son, that whoever believes in Him shall not perish but have eternal life." And again, as Jesus tells us in John 14:6, "I am the way and the truth and the life. No one comes to the Father except through me." Accepting that good news and then telling others about it, so they know too, is the definition of evangelism.

Evangelism comes from the Greek words 'euaggelion' — a good message, or gospel — and euaggelizo — to announce, declare, bring, or preach this good news. Notice the word "angel" tucked inside the word — an angel is a messenger. Those who practice evangelism are indeed delivering a message: One of extraordinarily good news, life-giving and transformative, with eternal ramifications.

While the word "evangelism" isn't mentioned a lot throughout the Bible, its theme is woven throughout the New Testament. All four gospels — Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John — are rooted in evangelism, and scholars often refer to the writers as "the evangelists."

For Jesus had a message, one He came to earth to deliver, teach, die, and rise again for every single one of us. And we are tasked to deliver that message both by Jesus and every other apostle in no uncertain terms.

What Does the Bible Say about Evangelism?

In addition to Jesus' own words about the importance of evangelism, His apostles said — and did — much the same. We know from the Book of Acts that after Christ's resurrection, the apostles were filled with the Holy Spirit and scattered across the land, preaching the word (Acts 8:4-25). In Romans, the apostle Paul spends time instructing the early church about the desperate need for evangelism so all can be saved. As Paul asks,

"How, then, can they call on the One they have not believed in? And how can they believe in the One of whom they have not heard? And how can they hear without someone preaching to them?" (Romans 10:14).

The message must be sent and delivered for it to be received, Paul writes — no matter the cost or risk. The apostle Peter urged us to "always be prepared to give an answer to everyone who asks you to give the reason for the hope that you have" (1 Peter 3:15).

We also see examples of evangelism throughout the New Testament, particularly in the Book of Acts. For example, Acts 2 tells us how Peter, filled with the Holy Spirit, preached boldly to the crowd, and about 3,000 people believed and were baptized (Acts 2:41).

In Acts 8, the Holy Spirit prompted Philip to approach an important Ethiopian official who was riding in his chariot south on a desert road toward Gaza. Philip obeyed, and when he heard the official reading the book of Isaiah, he used that to strike up a conversation that ultimately led to sharing the good news with the man — who believed and was baptized (Acts 8:26-40).

Also, in Acts is the story of how Paul and Silas shared the gospel with their jailer after a violent earthquake. The jailer believed, "he and his whole household" (Acts 16:34), and Paul and Silas baptized them all.

Here are a few more verses about why Evangelism is important:

Consequently, faith comes from hearing the message, and the message is heard through the word about Christ (Romans 10:17).

For when I preach the gospel, I cannot boast, since I am compelled to preach. Woe to me if I do not preach the gospel! (1 Corinthians 9:16).

Yet to all who did receive him, to those who believed in his name, he gave the right to become children of God (John 1:12).

"This is to my Father's glory, that you bear much fruit, showing yourselves to be my disciples" (John 15:8).
